

AT THE THEATRES

"THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH."

Tonight "Babes in Toyland" will close its successful engagement at the Grand. The curtain will rise at 8 sharp. Tomorrow night and until Saturday night Guy Bates Post in "The Heir to the Hoorah" will be the attraction at the Grand. The San Francisco Dramatic Review says of the production:

"We are getting the Eastern successes with becoming regularity this season. 'The Heir to the Hoorah' this week is pleasing for two things—a superb cast and a very pretty story. It will be found to be interesting to those who like a love story, those who have a tender feeling for a baby and those who delight in seeing a man win wealth and social position, overcoming by sheer native worth the conditions of birth and early environment. Guy Bates Post, a young actor who won distinction in 'The Virginian,' in a minor part, is the leading star of the 'Heir to the Hoorah.' Mr. Post played the young husband, Joe Lacey, in splendid style, and made him a natural, convincing figure."
